2. Funding

Secondly, all the budget for Youth Services has been allocated to existing programs and events. Funding would need to be obtained from other sources – whether it be internally or externally.

COMPARISON - EXISTING COMMITTEE

YOUTH ACTION KALAMUNDA
Youth Advisory Committee for Youth Services

Youth Committee Structure:
Fortnightly meetings during the school term
Deliver one event per term
Application process to become a member

The Group are responsible for identifying key issues among young people, varying from mental health to arts, sports and safety. Each term the group vote on the biggest issue and create an event to address it.

Previous events have included:

- Tee or Tie for Black Dog – charity dance raising money for the Black Dog Institute.
- Sport and Art stalls at the Jump, Climb, Create Youth Week Festival
- Youth Movie Night – Johnny English Strikes Again
- Lifelong Resilience – this term's event addressing stress and mental health for students

PROPOSAL

Based on the research and meetings with WA Police and other departments, the following structure has been identified as most likely to produce the greatest outcome. Reasoning for these choices is outlined in the rationale.

TARGET AUDIENCE

Youth aged 9 – 15 –Early Intervention

Rather than trying to engage at-risk young people, who WAPOL work with closely, we should instead target a younger audience and direct them towards positive pathways and promote program engagement for when they move into secondary school.

STRUCTURE

One Open Youth Consultation Session

- Large volume and range of ideas from young people – compared with input from a smaller sub-committee. Will attract new attendees and perspectives at each session held.
- Low commitment required, so more appealing to target audience
- Send invitation to schools as well as community
(Target age group not exclusive, open session to all interested young people (U25s))

- Present the group with a range of ideas eg. Midnight Basketball, Dismantle, Skate Programs and get the group to choose which would best suit the community
- Identify categories eg. arts, sports and community organisations to ensure that all interest areas have an opportunity to participate

Plus, if desired, a small sub-committee (online only)

- An online, email youth group can be contacted regarding small questions that require a fast response
- If required, the group can also be invited to attend the regular Committee Meeting to discuss and provide feedback on youth-related items when they occur
- Attendees at the brainstorming sessions will have their emails added to a database and can elect to remain on a sub-committee for projects and participate in further consultation

FREQUENCY

Twice a year, or if deemed necessary, increased to once a school term.

LINK TO MAIN COMMITTEE

1 Councillor, 1 Community Member, Committee Chairperson to attend youth sessions and report outcomes back to the Community Safety and Crime Prevention Committee

STRUCTURE COMPARISON

Group Consultation Session

- ✓ Larger number & variety of attendees
- ✓ Short time period, large output of ideas and direction
- ✓ Less committment - more appealing
- ✗ Isolated feedback, unless contacted after workshop

Sub-committee

- ✗ Smaller group targeted - no more than 15
- ✗ Longer commitment period
- ✗ Potential lag in results from ideas to project roll out may lead to reduced engagement
- ✓ Ongoing feedback

*The negative identified by hosting a group consultation session can be mitigated by having the small, online sub-committee.

RATIONALE

Based on initial discussions of targeting at-risk youth in a regulated, ongoing sub-committee, it was agreed that initially attracting a group and maintaining the numbers and engagement would be difficult in this format. Instead, discussions lead to the next most influenceable age or demographic and early intervention was identified. This group was identified as comprising of students in Years 5 and 6, before they transition into high school and adolescence. They are likely to be engaged, willing to provide feedback and be lead in a more positive direction.

There was also focus made towards identifying new youth programs to implement that would address concerns surrounding crime prevention and safety. A group brainstorming session would suit these outcomes. This structure also works to the time restraints with Youth Services – a one-off session once a term is more achievable.

If a sub-committee is still desirable, it would be more efficient to present discussion items to the already existing youth advisory committee – YAK – to provide feedback. Alternatively, the email sub-committee group is a more effective and time-saving way to communicate with the highly engaged and interested young people about more detailed progress and/or questions.
